I had an internship at Mesa Verde in 2006 during the summer, doing Level I Architectural Documentation. It is a real fancy way of saying that I drew rocks. But it's actually really detailed work where you go into the sites and you record the actual walls and every aspect and every feature in entire rooms to scale on a piece of paper, which in turn is logged into a database.

This summer 2008, I have an internship at Canyons of the Ancient National Monument. I have been going out and doing a lot of survey, using a lot of information that I learned while I was up at Mesa Verde. I have also been working on a lot of plans and learning quite a bit more about Cultural Resource Management.

Being at Fort Lewis and having the opportunity to have two internships, one at Mesa Verde and one at Canyons of the Ancient National Monument, and being so close to all the different cultural resources in this area, the Four Corners is an amazing.

I really don't think I could have gotten a better education in Anthropology than I got at Fort Lewis. I'm really happy with the education that I am getting.
